D. Reporting Relationships:

Reports to a Human Services Grants Manager. Typically does not supervise but does review and evaluate grant applications submitted by division directors and their staff.

E. Challenges and Problems:

Challenged to stay current with rules and regulations governing grants. This is difficult because of the frequency and impact of changes, which may be multi-faceted. Further challenged to understand the programs and services provided by the different divisions in the department in order to properly evaluate their grant applications.

Problems resolved include identifying alternative funding sources, providing federal reporting with complex requirements, identifying noncompliance with grants guidelines, maintaining consistency in accounting, noting special conditions for grants such as waivers, interpreting federal regulations; and project scheduling with various department personnel, vendors/consultants, and other state agency staff to ensure project stays on task.

F. Decision-making Authority:

Decisions made include whether grant applications are complete and in compliance, identification and proposal of needed changes to the control system for federal grants, whether subgrants are in compliance with federal requirements, identification of needed changes in administrative rules, and acceptance and approval of project phases and quality assurance.

Decisions referred apply to grant applications, including changes in programs due to changes in federal funding or regulations, final approval on whether adequate quality assurance systems are in place, and sensitive or political issues with regard to grant applications.

G. Contact with Others:

Daily contact with department division directors, other staff, and subgrantees to provide technical assistance relating to grants management and project management; and weekly contact with federal agencies to remain up-to-date on federal regulations governing grants and reporting systems.
